

This degree is awarded upon completion of two years of graduate study beyond a bachelor's degree, and represents a mastery of a specific field of study.

Master of Interior Design students learn design concepts and the elements of interior spaces. In addition to practical and advance design courses, a master's degree program in interior design also includes classes that focus on research and theoretical concepts such as: Drawing Interior lighting Color theory Furniture design Interior materials Human response and interior environments