

A certificate is the lowest level of all degree types, and is most commonly achieved as a means of career preparation. Certificates are often granted for very concentrated areas of study.

Medical assistants have the opportunity to gain experience in a healthcare setting, working directly under the supervision of administrators and physicians. The tasks that they are responsible for range from administrative work to clinical duties, which may include laboratory testing. While technically not required, a degree or certification in medical assisting demonstrates to potential employers a strong grasp of the skills required for the job. The number of opportunities in this field is expected to increase in the coming years.
